Simon Dubnov, The Book of Life: Memoirs and Reflections (English translation by Dianne Sattinger; edited, annotated and introduced by Benjamin Nathans and Viktor Kelner; under contract with the University of Wisconsin Press)

Public History:

Chair of Content Committee: The Jewish Museum and Tolerance Center, Moscow (2008-12; scholars from Russia, Israel and the United States), designed by Ralph Appelbaum Associates (New York). This 40,000 square-foot, $50 million museum explores the history and culture of Jews in the Russian Empire, Soviet Union, and today's Russian Federation. Opened 2012: <http://www.jewish-museum.ru/ru/timeline>

"The new Jewish Museum in Moscow, which is advertised as the largest in the world and, in fact, presents the Jewish experience in sincere, rich, and sophisticated ways, demonstrates that cosmopolitan thinking has found its way even into some of the most resistant environments."
