A General Overview of the Course

The United States was not inevitable. With that assumption as its starting point, this course surveys North American history from about 1500 to about 1850, with the continent's many peoples and cultures in view. The unpredictable emergence of the U.S. as a nation is a focus, but always in the context of wider developments: global struggles among European empires; conflicts between indigenous peoples and settler-colonists; exploitation of enslaved African labor; evolution of distinctive colonial societies; and, finally, independence movements inspired by a transatlantic revolutionary age.

Readings

Many of the readings for this course are online. The following books should be purchased, and are available at the Penn Book Center, 34th and Sansom Streets:

- Michael Schaller, et al., American Horizons, Concise: U.S. History in a Global Context, Vol. 1 (New York: Oxford University Press, 2012)
- Camila Townsend, Pocahontas and the Powhatan Dilemma: An American Portrait (New York: Hill and Wang, 2004)
- Ira Berlin, Many Thousands Gone: the First Two Centuries of Slavery in North America (Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard University Press, 1998)
- Noble E. Cunningham, ed., Jefferson vs. Hamilton: Confrontations That Shaped a Nation (Boston: Bedford-St. Martins, 2000)
- Rosemarie Zagari, Revolutionary Backlash: Women and Politics in the Early American Republic (Philadelphia: University of Pennsylvania Press, 2007)
- Brian DeLay, War of a Thousand Deserts: Indian Raids and the U.S.-Mexican War (New Haven: Yale University Press, 2008)

Course Requirements

Papers: At the end of each unit of the course you will write an essay of approximately 2,000 words in length, or about seven double-spaced pages. Papers are due on 1 March, 12 April, and 4 May; instructions will be posted on the course web site approximately two weeks in advance of the due dates. On the assumption that you need time to develop your skills in writing these essays, their significance for your grade will increase with each assignment: the first paper will determine 20%, the second 25%, and the final 30%.

Discussion: Your contributions to the success of the class will determine approximately 25% of your grade. Quality, not quantity, is the key factor. Quality can take many forms, but it is difficult to achieve without regular attendance and active participation in weekly discussion sections (our preferred term for what are usually called “recitations”). These discussions are one of the most important parts of this course; unexcused absences from them will substantially affect your grade.

E-Mail Reactions to Readings: To help you prepare for discussion and to provide a way for you to show your involvement outside the classroom, a significant portion of your discussion grade will be based on responses to the readings, sent as e-mail messages to your T.A. before class time. For detailed instructions, consult your T.A.

SCHEDULE OF TOPICS AND READING ASSIGNMENTS

INTRODUCTIONS

“History is the memory of things said and done.”

—Carl Lotus Becker, 1932

“History is chaos and every attempt to interpret it otherwise is an illusion. . . . The historian may seek to escape these issues by silence or by a confession of avoidance or he may face them boldly, aware of the intellectual and moral perils inherent in any decision—in his act of faith.”

—Charles A. Beard, 1934

III. REVOLUTIONARY LEGACIES, 1815-1850

“Democratic communities . . . are constantly filled with men who, having entered but yesterday upon their independent condition, are intoxicated with their new power. They entertain a presumptuous confidence in their own strength, and as they do not suppose that they can henceforward ever have occasion to claim the assistance of their fellow creatures, they do not scruple to show that they care for nobody but themselves.”
